

Three Sephardic Songs

for Concert Band

Steven Light

Medieval Spain was the meeting ground of Islam and the Christian West. The history of medieval Spain consists largely of the shifting of power between the Christians and Muslims, with the Jews always in the middle. The Jews had probably been in Spain since the time of Solomon (1000 BC). Jews were instrumental in helping the Moors to successfully invade Spain in 711 AD. Under the Moors the Jews prospered. After about 1136, Judaism was again forbidden and Jews were persecuted. In 1492, the Spanish Inquisition caused the Expulsion of the Jews (and all non-Catholics). Most crossed the Mediterranean settling in Turkey and around the Mediterranean basin. They carried with them an enormous body of folk songs, sung in Ladino (similar to old Spanish with some Hebrew thrown in). These three selections, the first two collected in Jerusalem in the 1960's, and the third found in Turkey (in Ladino with a refrain in Turkish) are representative of this fascinating musical tradition.

La rosa enflorece

*The rose blooms in May
My soul darkens, suffering from love
Nightingales sing, sighing of love
And the passion kills me, dying of love*

Una tadre fresquita de Mayo

*A cool afternoon in May, I went to the fields for a walk.
I encountered a young brunette soldier of tall stature.
He followed me, followed my steps,
Followed my steps and made me cheat.
Oh my, I did not know
What love with a soldier was.*

Si Verias a la Rana

(Ladino)

*If you see a frog sit on the oven
Frying her best potatoes
Disperse them your sisters
If you saw a camel
Sit at the table
Move your beautiful daughters who are thinner than a hair If you saw a rat
Sitting in the corner
Move your little muezin disperse your sisters
(Turkish)
I love you, I love you much!*
